COVID-19 Pandemic

From January 2020, due to the COVID-19 pandemic situation, global financial markets have experienced significant volatility. This has resulted in severe disruptions in the supply chain, travel and border restrictions, a fall in consumer demand and general market uncertainty. The FIL Limited Group ("FIL", "FIL International" or "Fidelity") business contingency plans have been activated gradually across all FIL International locations since the beginning of 2020. This has included the implementation of remote access to enable FIL Group employees to work from home.

Despite these exceptional circumstances, all Fund-related controls have remained unchanged and continue to run. No significant operational problems or performance issues or system outage have been identified to date.

Fidelity International (including FIL Investment Management (Luxembourg) S.A. ("FIMLUX") has been in a heightened phase of liquidity and counterparty monitoring across the Fund's portfolios. Market and transaction data relevant to any and each sub-fund of Fidelity Funds have been considered and analysed on a more frequent basis during this period in order to ensure the calculation of accurate NAVs that are fully representative of prevailing market conditions and to consider potential areas of concern and whether it could be in the best interests of Shareholders of the Fund to invoke additional liquidity management measures.

In accordance with the update to the Swing Pricing FAQs of the CSSF, which were issued on 20 March 2020, certain changes to the swing pricing policy were approved in response to the market situation, as notified to Shareholders via publication on Fidelity's website. A copy of this publication can be found at www.fidelity.lu.

The Board of Directors of the Company ("the Board") has been kept duly and appropriately informed of matters relating to the impact of COVID-19 on the Company and the steps being taken to ensure that the interests of shareholders remain a priority.

Performance Overview - 6 months ending 31 October 2021

Equity Markets

Global equities, as measured by the MSCI World Index, gained in US dollar terms over the period, as the economic recovery and re-opening continued. Upbeat corporate earnings and an accelerated roll-out of COVID-19 vaccines in developed markets also provided support. However, rising inflation and prospects of policy tightening by major central banks held back gains. Concerns over new, more infectious COVID-19 strains, supply chain disruptions, and fears of contagion from China Evergrande Group's debt situation further weighed on markets.

Against this global backdrop, US and Europe ex UK equities were the leading performers. However, emerging markets fell and lagged developed markets, amid economic and policy risks in China and virus-related challenges. From a sector perspective, energy companies led gains as crude oil prices moved higher. Information technology, financials and health care stocks also rose strongly. Overall, returns in US dollar terms were weighed down by its appreciation against the yen, euro and sterling.

European equities registered strong gains. At the start of the period, markets were supported by improving sentiment around an economic reopening, strong economic data and upbeat corporate earnings, coupled with continued assurances of support from the European Central Bank (ECB). Some of these gains were limited by concerns around increasing inflation, higher bond yields and the prospect of tighter monetary policy. ECB President Christine Lagarde reiterated the theme of transitory inflation, but believes that inflation and supply chain impacts will last longer than initially expected. On a positive note, the European economy has recovered steadily from the pandemic, with GDP rising by 2.2% in the third quarter, beating expectations.

UK equities advanced, supported by a sharp pick-up in corporate earnings and continued strength in economic data, alongside a spate of merger and acquisition activity. However, a combination of persistent supply chain bottlenecks and rising fuel costs led to concerns that longer lasting inflationary risks could force the Bank of England (BoE) to raise rates soon. Meanwhile, worries about the spread of a more transmissible COVID-19 variant continued to cap gains. While the number of COVID-19 cases picked up in August, hospitalisations have remained relatively low, as vaccines continue to prove effective in reducing the number of individuals needing treatment. Utilities stocks performed well on reports that UK Prime Minister Boris Johnson was considering loans to industries struggling with rising fuel prices. Conversely, the telecommunications and basic materials sectors lagged the market.

US markets rose, supported by positive corporate results across a broad range of sectors, while the economy returned to pre-pandemic spending patterns. Many states continued to reopen and loosened social distancing regulations. The rise in the Delta variant of COVID-19 somewhat diminished sentiment as consumers put discretionary expenditure on hold. A combination of supply shortages, price normalisation in certain sectors and pent-up demand contributed to a 30-year high headline inflation reading later in September. Many companies reported shortages and import delays. To ease stressed supply chains, the Joe Biden Administration allowed ports to remain operational for 24 hours a day in October. The deadlock in the US Congress discouraged investors over a revised $1.8 trillion framework and a possible government shutdown. Meanwhile, the US Federal Reserve (Fed) said it will begin tapering the pace of its asset purchases later in November.

Japanese equities advanced over the period. Share price gains were supported by strong earnings momentum and domestic political developments, while rising vaccination rates also lifted investor sentiment. In September, Prime Minister Yoshihide Suga pulled out of the Liberal Democratic Party leadership race, paving the way for a fresh government, with the ruling party electing former foreign minister Fumio Kishida as its new leader. However, the Japanese government's decision to extend the state of emergency amid rising concerns over the spread of the Delta variant of COVID-19 weighed on sentiment earlier in the period. Earnings results were favourable, generally coming in ahead of expectations, and the market reacted positively to companies that announced upward revisions and increased dividends.

Pacific ex Japan equities declined over the period. Gains were capped amid concerns over a resurgence in COVID-19 cases. Australian equities advanced the most, driven by strong corporate earnings and a relatively resilient domestic economy through the pandemic. However, a regulatory overhaul in China affecting companies that handle large amounts of data and after school tutoring businesses, as well as new regulations on how Chinese entities list on stock markets outside of the country weighed on Hong Kong equities.

Emerging markets delivered negative returns over the review period. Markets started on a positive note and were supported by a weaker US dollar, which was driven by a fall in US Treasury yields. However, weakness in Chinese stocks negatively impacted the region. As the period drew to a close, markets were badly hurt by the sell-off in the property and banking sectors, after beleaguered property developer China Evergrande warned that its cash position was worsening. The series of events in China hampered investor sentiment, which was reflected at both the country and regional level, where emerging Asia disappointed. Bucking the trend in emerging markets, equities in Emerging Europe, Middle East and Africa (EMEA) ended in positive territory. Markets were supported by rising crude oil and gas prices. Brent crude oil surpassed the US$85 per barrel mark for the first time since October 2018. Rising crude oil prices and gas shortages bode well for the Russian market.

Inflation pressures could derail the equity rally

Source: MSCI, Bloomberg, 09.11.2021

After a sustained period of record breaking monetary and fiscal intervention, inflation is now being seen as the major challenge for economies. In the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic, policymakers committed to unprecedented levels of monetary and fiscal support for the global economy. But the combination of vast amounts of liquidity being pumped through the system and supply issues caused by the closure and re-opening of economies is resulting in inflationary pressures. The supply challenges in some sectors have been exacerbated by labour shortages, with the US and UK in particular reporting record vacancies and accelerating wages. Initially, rising prices were considered transitionary, but with months of higher prices touching everything from food to energy prices, some economists now expect inflation to stick around for longer. As we consider inflationary pressures, those businesses with the power to pass on increasing costs are likely to be better positioned to thrive than peers. Businesses with established market positions, true innovation, and the ability to pass on price increases are likely to be able to maintain their competitive advantage.

Bond markets

Monetary policy concerns increased amid persistent inflation dynamics over the review period. After rising sharply towards the end of the first quarter of 2021 given the momentum in reflation trade, government bond yields declined for a brief period towards the end of June and early July following a change in narrative by the US Fed with regards to inflation. However, yields have continued to rise from thereon as global central banks geared up to tighten their monetary policies. The US Fed signalled that it could start winding down its asset purchases soon. The BoE also indicated that it is considering raising interest rates before tapering its quantitative easing, and the ECB decided to lower its Pandemic Emergency Purchase Programme. Interest rate volatility increased in October, with major markets seeing wild moves across the yield curve. On the credit front, corporate bonds remained remarkably resilient amid growing optimism over the economic recovery. Credit spreads tightened for most of the period, driven by an improvement in the growth outlook, rising COVID-19 vaccinations and strong corporate earnings. However, gains were offset towards the end of the period amid rising volatility related to supply chain constraints, spiking input prices and a surge in COVID-19 cases.

Global central banks get ready to taper their monetary policies

Source: Bloomberg, 31.10.2021

While central banks appear to be gearing up to taper monetary stimulus, the macroeconomic environment is opaque and there is no clarity on how the economy will eventually shape up, both in terms of growth and inflation. As a result, the next two quarters will be difficult for central banks, as supply chain issues are unlikely to be resolved and the growth momentum appears to be going in the wrong direction. While growth at an absolute level could be above pre-COVID-19 levels, it is the rate of change rather than absolute levels that impacts risk assets. Therefore, we expect volatility to pick up and are likely to see more frequent periods of drawdown in 2022. Going forward, we will need to be more circumspect about risk markets and will adopt a more defensive approach.
